Senior Seminar description
The Senior Seminar focuses on an area of theological study related to the practice of ministry, providing M.Div. students in their final year of study an opportunity to integrate the various elements of their theological education in a way that contributes to the ongoing discernment of their vocation. Students will produce a substantial essay or project that brings the methods of theological study to bear on problems and opportunities in ministry and that expresses the student’s theological vision.

Course: Faith and Violence
Violence in our contemporary world has many stimuli and manifestations. It impacts the lives of people of diverse ethnicities, cultures, geographical, economic and social realities. Though the causes and manifestations are diverse, the results for many people are the same - violence results in pain and suffering for many of the parties involved. As leaders of faith communities, students will be called upon to respond to violence in various forms throughout their ministries. In this course, students will grapple with violence in the Bible and in contemporary life, and study a variety of constructive Christian responses to violence, in order to develop strategies for addressing violence in their own contexts.

Course goals
This course will provide an opportunity for senior students to integrate theological study with pastoral practice and build their capacity for contextual theological-ethical interpretation and analysis. The instructors will work with students to create a space for free, creative, and collaborative theological experimentation/play and discovery. Students will
1. Bring their passions for ministry and theological reflection into productive conversation with religious and cultural traditions,
2. Gain practice in the practices of vocational discernment and ethical discipline,
3. Refine their skills of constructive theological and ethical reflection and expression,
4. Work towards a deeper understanding of the roles of vocation and ethics in the practices of ministry and the life of faith,
5. Continue processes of vocational discernment that are theologically grounded, ethically informed, and that draw on several theological disciplines (biblical studies, historical and constructive theology, ethics, practical theology).
Course requirements

1. Preparation and participation: Students are expected to attend all seminar meetings, read all assigned material, and enter into thoughtful discussion of the matters the class takes up. “Special Assignments” should be posted on CAMS before the start of class each week, and students should have access to their assignments in class. Students are partners to one another in their work for this course, so conscientious preparation for each seminar meeting is essential.

2. Topic Description and Progress report: Students will submit a description of the topic on which they will work in this seminar (due Week 3), and a revised description outlining progress made toward the goal of a completed essay or project, with a bibliography (due Week 5).

3. Sermon Manuscripts: Students will submit one sermon manuscript using their choice of suggested texts. Manuscripts must be 3-5 double spaced pages and are due on October 31. Resources for sermon development are referenced in the syllabus.

4. Senior Seminar essay or project: The culminating project of the seminar will focus on an area of interest that relates in some way to the seminar topic. The topic should emerge from the student’s own theological interests and passions. The project may be expressed in the writing of a substantial essay (about 20 pages). It may also be a performance, a particular practice of ministry, a liturgical project, curriculum, or a work of art, in which case the project submitted would include some demonstration of the practice (where applicable) together with a substantial, written critical analysis (10-15 pages). The final determination of the project, its scope, and resources necessary to produce it will be the work of the student together with the instructors, in collaboration with the other seminar participants. Students, thus, will have an opportunity to draw on the perspectives of their colleagues as the project is conceived and undertaken.

5. Work-in-Progress Presentation and Sample Reading: Students will present to the seminar their work in progress (weeks of November 14 and 28), submitting five days in advance of the presentation a written summary (4-6 pages) that will serve as the basis for a student colleague’s prepared response (see 6., below). In addition, students will be asked to assign a short reading to accompany their presentations to the class of their work-in-progress. These reading assignments should also be submitted five days in advance.

6. Response paper: Students will write a short (2-3 page) response to a student colleague’s class presentation of their final essay or project.

Required Texts

Academic Honesty
All work turned in to the instructors is expected to be the work of the student whose name appears on the assignment. Any borrowing of the ideas or the words of others must be acknowledged by quotation marks (where appropriate) and by citation of author and source. Students unfamiliar with issues relating to academic honesty can find help from the staff in the Academic Support Center and should make use of the available resources at an early date, since violations of seminary policy on academic honesty can lead to a failing grade for the course.

Inclusive Language
The use of inclusive language in course work is a policy of Louisville Presbyterian Seminary. Direct quotations from theological texts and translations of the Bible do not have to be altered to conform to this policy. In your own writing, however, avoid language for people that leaves out part of the population or perpetuates stereotypes. Do not assume masculine gender when the gender of the person is unknown. When referring to God, you are encouraged to use a variety of images and metaphors. See http://www.lpts.edu/Academic Resources/ASC/avoidinggenderbiasinlanguage.asp.
